"The Voice in the Night" is a short story by English writer William Hope Hodgson, first published in the November 1907 edition of Blue Book Magazine. The story has been adapted a number of times, most prominently in the 1963 Japanese film Matango. Weird fungi in the shape of animals or humans are a recurring theme in Hodgson's stories and novels; for example, in the novel The Boats of the "Glen Carrig" the survivors of a shipwreck come across tree-like plants that mimic birds and people.

The Voice in the Night . It was a dark, starless night. We were becalmed in the Northern Pacific. Our exact position I do not know; for the sun had been hidden during the course of a weary, breathless week, by a thin haze which had seemed to float above us, about the height of our mastheads, at whiles descending and shrouding the surrounding sea.

"The Voice in the Night' was written about 1907. I read it for the first time when I was a teenager. I reread it today. I still remains a very well written short horror story. A ship is becalmed in the Pacific Ocean. Two sailors are hailed by a strange voice from the night. The strange person asks for some food. The sailors float out some provisions.
