Tom Canty and Edward Tudor could have been identical twins. Their birthdays match, their faces match, but there the likeness stops. For Edward is a prince, heir to King Henry VIII, whilst Tom is a miserable pauper. But when fate intervenes, Edward is thrown out of the palace in rags, leaving ignorant Tom to play the part of a royal prince. Even those who have never read the novel will be familiar with Twain's classic tale of mistaken identity: at once an adventure story and a fantasy of timeless appeal. When young Prince Edward meets a pauper who resembles him, they trade clothes and switch places. The prince learns of the plight of common folk while the pauper learns how the nobility live.

The Prince and the Pauper, Part 2. by Mark Twain Tom Canty, left alone in the prince's cabinet, made good use of his opportunity. He turned himself this way and that before the great mirror, admiring his finery; then walked away, imitating the prince's high-bred carriage, and still observing results in the glass. Next he drew the beautiful sword, and bowed, kissing the blade, and laying it across his breast, as he had seen a noble knight do, by way of salute to the lieutenant of the Tower, five or six weeks before, when delivering the great lords of Norfolk and Surrey into his hands for captivity. Tom played with the jewelled dagger that hung upon his thigh; he examined the costly and exquisite ornaments of the room; he tried each of the sumptuous chairs, and thought how proud he would be if the Offal Court herd could only peep in and see him in his grandeur. He wondered if they would believe the marvellous tale he should tell when he got home, or if they would shake their heads, and say his overtaxed imagination had at last upset his reason. We are delighted to publish this classic book as part of our extensive Classic Library collection. A prince and a peasant temporarily switch lives, only to find themselves in a race against the clock to return the rightful heir to the throne and save the Kingdom from an evil plot.

The Prince and the Pauper is a novel by American author Mark Twain. It was first published in 1881 in Canada, before its 1882 publication in the United States. The novel represents Twain's first attempt at historical fiction. Set in 1537 it tells the story of two young boys who were born on the same day and are identical in appearance. Tom Canty a pauper who lives with his abusive alcoholic father in Offal Court off Pudding Lane in London and Edward VI of England son of Henry VIII of England.

London was fifteen hundred years old, and was a great town-for that day. It had a hundred thousand inhabitants-some think double as many. The streets were very narrow, and crooked, and dirty, especially in the part where Tom Canty lived, which was not far from London Bridge. The houses were of wood, with the second story projecting over the first, and the third sticking its elbows out beyond the second. The higher the houses grew, the broader they grew. They were skeletons of strong criss-cross beams, with solid material between, coated with plaster. The beams were painted red or blue or black, according to the owner's taste, and this gave the houses a very picturesque look. The windows were small, glazed with little diamond-shaped panes, and they opened outward, on hinges, like doors.

The diary started when the first woman in the Bible named Eve was one day old. Eve felt that she was just an experiment and nothing more. she kept on wondering about such things. She was so curious about God's creations that surrounded her, and all she did was to observe the moon, the mountains and most of all, the stars. Eve was trying to reach the stars and get even just one of them for her to put something on her hair. Until she knew that there was another human being named Adam and came up with the idea of following him around. At first, Adam ignored her but she did her best to get his scrutiny. Then they became friends and she began designing everything in her surroundings. When Adam ignored her, Eve seeks comfort with her so called "sister" - her reflection in a pool of water. After that, she then made some examinations or experiments with the fire. Unfortunately, she accidentally set a fire all over the forest. Suddenly, there was something strange that struck her, and it was an unusual discovery for her - it was the feelings of fear. Eve was going on such long expeditions away from Adam with her friends - the animals. She was again being extremely curious about all she saw around her. Then her diary bounded forward to the future, after they sinned against God (The Fall of the Garden Eden). Adam and Eve became an affectionate couple and Eve considered on the essence of her intimate love for Adam. She determined that she loved him because he was hers and he was macho. The diary ended after 40 years later, when Eve was believing about her death. She said that she would like to die first because Adam was stronger. She said that she will be depressed and couldn't live without him. After all, Adam had a thought at eve's graveside. Even wheresoever she was, there was still Eden.
